DELL COMICS ARE GOOD COMICS

It was getting dark as Rinky's father drove the second-hand car he had bought two weeks ago over the bumpy range of the Circle-O-Ranch.

"Don't worry, Rinky. We'll find Whitey and Thunder. After all, they just can't disappear. Not even on a ranch as big as the Circle-O."

"But, Daddy, my pony, Whitey, and your horse, Thunder, have been missing for three days. This is the first time they've ever run away," said Rinky.

"I wonder what made them do it. They were mighty sick for a whole week, too, before they ran away. Even Doc Hines couldn't figure out what was ailing them. Said it seemed as though something was worrying them," continued Rinky's father.

"We took good care of Whitey and Thunder," Rinky said.

"I just can't understand it. Come on, Rinky, we'll head back to the ranch house. We've been driving around the range all day looking for them. They'll come home when they get hungry," said Rinky's father.

As the car approached the ranch house Rinky said, "It's a good thing you bought me that new bicycle when you bought your car two weeks ago, Daddy. With our horses gone we wouldn't be able to get around the ranch."

"Right. I haven't ridden Thunder since I bought this car. Guess you haven't ridden Whitey since you got your bicycle, either."

Rinky's father parked the car by the barn and they walked slowly into the ranch house together.

"I can tell you didn't find Whitey or Thunder just by looking at your faces," said Big Jeff, the cook at the Circle-O-Ranch.

Rinky and his father sat down. They were both very sad and worried. Suddenly a loud BANG! CRASH! BAM! came from outside. They all ran out of the ranch house. There was Whitey, Rinky's all-white pony. And Whitey was kicking Rinky's bicycle to pieces

"Stop it, Whitey!" shouted Rinky. Immediately, Whitey trotted meekly over to Rinky.

"I've got it, Rinky! I know why Whitey acted ill. He was jealous of your bicycle. Remember you didn't ride Whitey ever since you got the bicycle. Look at him. Whitey's completely recovered!" exclaimed Rinky's father.

"It's wonderful to have a pony like you so much, Rinky. Don't be angry with Whitey. He only kicked your bicycle so you would have to ride him again. You've got to act like a big man about this, Rinky!"

Rinky hugged Whitey and said, "Who cares about an old bicycle? I've got my Whitey back!"

His father was going to say something when a terrific clatter came from the barn. CRASH! WHAM! POW! POW! Big Jeff grinned as the great, all-black horse, Thunder, trotted up and gently nuzzled Rinky's father.

"Who cares about an old automobile, anyway?" exclaimed Rinky's smiling father as he petted the horse. "I've got my Thunder back!"
